

PUBLICITY TOOL KIT

Promoting your program and fundraising through the media

PUBLICITY TOOL KIT

A WorldStrides travel program for students provides a unique opportunity to bring positive attention to your school, your team, or your community. We have crafted this kit to help you maximise that attention—whether you’re aiming to amp up your fundraising efforts or just tell the story of your travelling group! We hope you find these tips, ideas, and templates to be helpful along the way.

INTRODUCTION

WorldStrides offers tools to assist you every step of the way while planning your program. Publicity is a powerful tool that can help take your planning and fundraising goals, as well as your trip, to the next level. In this kit, we’ll discuss what publicity can do for you and your students as you prepare for and explore the places you are visiting. Our goal is to get you the most traction and to garner exposure for your trip and your school.

WHAT IS PUBLICITY (AND WHY DO YOU CARE)?

The most basic definition of publicity is to deliver information to the general public through the media. For any business or campaign, public relations is a vital aspect of marketing for campaign or fundraising success. It allows you and your students to get the word out free of charge. Let us say that last part one more time for emphasis—FREE OF CHARGE!

What's newsworthy?

One of the most important practices when trying to garner publicity is knowing what the media is going to cover and what they won't. Here are some questions reporters ask themselves:

- > Is it unusual? Did something out of the ordinary happen? Is a local representative planning on giving your class a tour on your trip to the Northern Territory? Did you meet a celebrity?
- > Is it interesting or significant? Did a local athlete or celebrity donate to your trip? Did a student have a life-changing experience while visiting a museum?
- > Is it new? We have a saying at WorldStrides—stories are like French fries. They are best served fresh and hot! Nobody likes soggy fries, and journalists don't like old news. Make sure you are giving reporters access to your story as it's happening!

Newsworthy moments during your WorldStrides journey:

- > The Start: your invitation to perform at an event or your decision to travel
- > Planning: fundraising and making it happen
- > Departure
- > Notable moments while travelling—like meeting someone of importance or winning an award
- > Your return

CRAFTING YOUR PITCH

Depending on what you're pitching, you'll likely fit into one of these three formats:

MEDIA ALERT

Hosting a fundraiser? A media alert invites media to attend your event. Your alert should be a one-page document that provides the Five Ws (who, where, what, when, and why) of the event. Media alerts are typically sent out one to three days prior to the event.

COMMUNITY EVENT CALENDARS

Do you have four to six-weeks' notice on your fundraising event? In addition to a media alert, there are lots of local calendars that would be happy to include your event for free!

PRESS RELEASES

Different than a media alert, a press release contains more complete information and may be printed in full by some media outlets. Essentially, you're asking the media to write about your news. Read more below about writing a press release.

The angle

Now that you've decided what you'll present to the media for coverage, ask yourself, what's the best way to explain what I want them to take from this?

EXAMPLE:

Okay: "We are having a fundraiser to raise money for our trip to Central Australia"

Anyone can host a fundraiser. What's going to make someone's head turn and want to attend?

Better: "(Insert School Name) will send XX students to (location) on (Day, Month, Year). For many, this trip will be their first out-of-state trip and we need the community's help to make it happen!"

OR CONSIDER THIS:

Okay: "Our high school band was selected for the Festival of Gold."

Put yourself in the reader's shoes. What's special about this?

Better: "Practice Makes Perfect! Local high school band selected to perform at world-famous Carnegie Hall."

HOW TO WRITE A PRESS RELEASE

A press release should be no more than a page long and cover everything you want your audience to know. Here are some basics of press release writing:

- > Always make sure your final, approved release says “FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE”. See the template. This statement informs your recipient that all of the information is accurate and ready to be published.
- > Is your title catchy? Your title will make or break your release—it will most likely be the deciding factor in whether or not someone reads it.

The format

- > INTRO PARAGRAPH—THE 5Ws: Your intro paragraph will cover the Who, What, Where, When and Why.
 - What has happened/is about to happen?
 - Who is involved?
 - When did it happen/is it going to happen?
 - Where did it take place/is going to take place?
 - Why did it take place/is this happening? What is the bigger picture?
- > PARAGRAPH TWO: The second paragraph should contain additional information about your school, class, and the greater goal.
- > PARAGRAPH THREE: A quote from a teacher, parent or student.
- > PARAGRAPH FOUR: Your conclusion—make sure to include any websites or phone numbers you want the reader to have in this paragraph.
- > THREE HASHTAGS (POUND SIGN): Following the text, place three hashtags at the bottom centre of the release. This informs the reader that the release is complete.
- > MEDIA CONTACT: Choose who you would like to receive calls or emails regarding media opportunities. See the template.

REMEMBER: You're writing this release in the style of news coverage. Take a look at some newspaper articles if you need some stylistic suggestions.

CONTACTING MEDIA

Now that you have your press materials together, create a list of where you want your material to go. Here are some ideas:

- > Local Newspaper
- > Broadcast News
- > Radio Stations
- > Alternative Newspapers
- > Local Magazines
(must have four- to six-weeks' notice)

How do you reach out? Though it may take some legwork, it's not as hard as you might imagine! Here are some helpful hints:

- > TAP YOUR CONNECTIONS. Do you know someone who works in the media? Now's the time to call in a favour. Give them your materials and see if they can work their magic.
- > SEND AN EMAIL. If you're pitching to broadcast news, you can usually find the email address on the contact page of the news programs website. For newspapers, you're looking for editors or journalists in education or community news. You can also reach out to individual reporters who cover community news, schools, culture, or other relevant topics.

PRO TIP

Have a new reporter in town? Send your release and media alert directly to them! The main anchors and senior writers get TONS of story ideas and pitches in their inbox. The new reporters are still trying to make connections.

- > THE POWER OF SOCIAL MEDIA: Many journalists use social media sites not only as a way to post their work, but as a way to find news stories to report, too. Tag individual reporters in a tweet about your trip or fundraiser. You may also want to post your event on local Facebook pages. Many community pages are followed by news reporters who are looking for story ideas.
- > FOLLOW UP. Pick up the phone and say hello. You would be amazed by how many emails are never read until you call and ask if a journalist has received your email. This is also a great way to give them a nudge if they are on the fence about covering your story.
- > GET 'CONTINUING COVERAGE':
A news organisation that covers you once may be apt to follow-up. If a reporter covers your fundraiser, for example, let them know when you have achieved your goals, and they may cover your departure or return!

A word about the email subject line

Journalists get hundreds of email pitches in their inbox a week. What's going to set your pitch apart from the rest? Making sure your subject is eye-popping without overhyping your release can be a slippery slope. Start with the most interesting aspect of your release. If 60 students from your school will be travelling, start with that. If you're travelling to Italy, go from there. And finally, if you are $5,000 away from your goal, add it!

EXAMPLE PITCH:

"60 XXX Senior School students to travel to Italy in 2023. Only $5k away from goal."

Timing tips from a pro

> BEST AND WORST TIME TO SEND A RELEASE

- BEST TIME: Tuesdays and Wednesdays are usually the best time to send a press release. With many journalists' deadlines being at the end of the week, sending early- to mid-week will give you the best shot of presenting a reporter with a good story when they're trying to find content.
- WORST TIME: Never send a release on a Friday or Monday. Friday mornings are a time when deadlines are due and Friday afternoons are downtime for reporters. Mondays are just that—Mondays. Like most of us, our inboxes are filled from the weekend and it's easy for an email to be overlooked.

> BEST TIME TO FOLLOW UP WITH A NEWS STATION

- BEST TIME: The best time to contact a news station and get your story on their radar is before the morning editorial meetings. Editorial meetings cover stories the team is working on and what is being covered for the day. They normally take place between 10am and 11am.
- WORST TIME: If you're pitching to a news station, never send your materials or call to follow up during these times:
 - Before or during a newscast (6am – 8am or even 9am, noon and the evening news)
 - Never, never, never call to follow up during breaking news! No reporter will be looking for new content during a breaking news story.

> BEST AND WORST TIMES FOR YOUR EVENT (IF APPLICABLE)

- If you want TV coverage for an event like a fundraiser, look at the time the newscasts are happening. Then, steer clear of them! In most cities, resources are most available between 10am-3pm, or if it must be at night, between 6:30pm-7:30pm. Resources are tight in the morning, in the two hours just before the evening news, and again in the 2 hours before the late news.

MAKING THE MOST OF COVERAGE

Prepare for an interview

Great job! A reporter has agreed to cover you! Now what?

If your story is picked up by a local media outlet, make sure you have students, teachers, and even parents queued up for a potential interview. Pick people who are well-spoken and aren't camera shy. Feel free to practice a little!

While you probably won't receive interview questions in advance, here are some questions that could be asked:

- > FOR TEACHERS: Why did you choose this destination? Why is this trip important to you?
- > FOR STUDENTS: What are you looking forward to most about your travel?
- > FOR PARENTS: Why do you feel this trip is important for your son/daughter?

Be flexible

Remember, reporters can and will contact you on a moment's notice. Make sure you know who is going to speak on behalf of your event and be willing to go at the drop of a hat!

Be proactive

If a reporter covers your story in the planning process, they may cover it again when you return. Make sure you have parents and students willing to speak upon your return.

Promote your promotion

Taking the reins and being your own publicist to help create buzz about your trip can be a fun experience. Share the news story that you were part of on Facebook and Twitter, and ask parents, educators, and even the school to do the same. Remember, every media success will result in not only your trip's success, but in bringing attention to your school, your program, and your students!
